Holiday Drive Seeks Donations, Volunteers

The 2002 Rockville Holiday Drive is on its way and this year, more than ever, donations are being sought to assist Rockville residents in need during the November and December holiday seasons.

"Due to the economic climate, we're expecting that more families will need assistance this year," said Mary Lou Jacobs, Program Manager for Rockville's Department of Neighborhood and Community Services. "We're so grateful for the significant contributions from Mount Calvary Baptist Church, IBM, Manna Food Center and other organizations that we partner with to make the drive a success. And we look forward to another strong holiday drive this year."

Last year, the City distributed 1,244 holiday baskets in November and December. This year, the goal is 1,300, as a result of growing needs of Rockville residents.

Nonperishable food donations are being accepted at the Manna Food Center, 614 Lofstrand Lane (off Southlawn Lane) Monday-Friday, 8:30-11 a.m. (designate that the food is for the "Rockville Holiday Drive"). Additionally, during regular business hours, donations may be left at the Department of Neighborhood and Community Services, 32 Courthouse Sq.; the back porch of Glenview Mansion (Baltimore Road and Edmonston Drive); or the Rockville Senior Center (1150 Carnation Dr.). On weekends or after 5 p.m., donations can be left at the Rockville Police Station at the rear of City Hall (111 Maryland Ave.).

Monetary donations are welcome. Checks should be made payable to the Rockville Holiday Drive Fund and mailed to: Department of Neighborhood & Community Services, Attn: Rockville Holiday Drive, 32 Courthouse Sq., Rockville, Md., 20850.

Another way residents can make the 2002 Rockville Holiday Drive a success is to volunteer their time.

City Passes Six-Month Building Moratorium

Measure Will Not Affect Development of Town Center

66 This six-month study will strengthen neighborhoods,

giving us an opportunity to get ahead of the curve.

– Mayor Larry Giammo

The Mayor and Council on Sept. 23 unanimously approved a six-month moratorium on issuing building permits for development in nonresidential zones adjacent to residential zones that contain single-family detached homes, attached homes and multifamily dwellings.

The moratorium, which will have no effect on the City's intent to develop a vibrant Town Center, will remain in effect through March 23, 2003. During the moratorium period, Rockville City staff will evaluate standards affecting development of nonresidential properties that immediately adjoin residential properties.

There are approximately 70 nonresidential properties that share a property line with residential areas with the potential to be developed under current zoning. Mayor Larry Giammo and Councilmembers Bob Dorsey, John Hall Jr., Susan Hoffmann and Anne Robbins voted 5-0 to put the moratorium in place.

"This six-month study will strengthen neighborhoods, giving us an opportunity to get ahead of the curve," said Mayor Larry Giammo.

Eight nonresidential properties were presented to the Mayor and Council as being under various stages of the permit application process. The parameters set by > the moratorium exempted from the moratorium six of those properties. The two properties with pending applications that will be covered by the sixmonth moratorium are Sonic Automotive at the southwest corner of Rockville Pike and Talbott Street (Rockville Porsche Audi dealership) and 22 West Jefferson St.

During the moratorium period, City staff will review elements of the zoning ordinance including setbacks, height limits, floor area ratios, minimum/maximum lot sizes, permitted land uses and landscaping/screening.

Fire Sprinklers Required For All New Single-Family Homes

All new single-family homes in Rockville must be built with fire sprinklers, making the City one of 46 jurisdictions nationally to unconditionally require the safety measure in single-family homes, the Mayor and Council unanimously decided on Sept. 23.

Prince George's County, which has had a similar ordinance since 1988, is the only other Washington metropolitan area jurisdiction to require sprinklers in all new

The measure will only apply to new construction and will not be retroactive to existing single-family housing. It will not apply to additions to existing homes. However, if a home is substantially demolished and rebuilt, the rebuilt structure would be required to have sprinklers. Rockville already requires sprinkler systems for multifamily dwellings and townhouses.

City Councilmember John Hall Jr., a volunteer firefighter and paramedic who has been active in Montgomery County Fire and Rescue for 13 years, proposed the measure this past summer.

"This Mayor and Council is concerned about public safety, and this is a smart, efficient and effective measure that proves that," said Councilmember Hall. "The numbers do not lie and the evidence is overwhelming: fire sprinklers save lives. We, as a Mayor and Council, are willing to step forward and invest in the future and safety of Rockville residents. We are taking a bold step—and we hope other jurisdictions will follow."

Rockville is one of 46 jurisdictions nationwide to require fire sprinklers in all newly constructed, single-family homes.

It is estimated that sprinkler systems will add about $1.20 per square foot in new residential homes. That would add approximately $3,500-4,000 to the cost of a new 3,000 square-foot home.

Since the measure will require homes that are destroyed or demolished to be rebuilt with sprinklers, residents are urged to contact their insurance providers to be sure that their coverage will include installation of sprinklers in a rebuilt home.

Also passed on Sept. 23, was a measure that requires new homes in Rockville to post address numerals that are at least 5 inches high (the current standard is 4 inches), on a contrasting background, which are clearly visible from the street. The order is not retroactive.

Students at College Gardens Elementary School practice bicycle safety concepts presented during the new Bicycle and Pedestrian Safety Education program, which is expected to reach schools throughout Maryland. Corp. Christopher Louis (above) helped children throughout the morning at College Gardens.

Traveling Safety in City Schools

With several shiny bikes, protective helmets, hand-painted stop signs, a working traffic signal and human-powered vehicle signs, the students at College Gardens Elementary School on Sept. 25 were the first to receive formal Bicycle and Pedestrian Safety Education, developed by the City of Rockville and others.

Mayor Larry Giammo delivered opening remarks at the launch of the first program of its kind to be presented in Maryland schools. The interactive bicycle segment included teaching the importance of wearing a helmet, understanding the rules of the road, stopping properly, turning and signaling. The pedestrian concepts included looking left-right-left before crossing streets and crossing at appropriate locations.

In its first day, the program reached almost 100 students at College Gardens Elementary during their regularly scheduled physical education classes. Rockville's Bikeway Implementation Specialist Debbie Mayer and College Gardens Physical Education Teacher Diane Zabetakis delivered the instruction with the help of the Rockville Police Department (Corporal Christopher Louis and Sergeant Jim Walsh), the Montgomery County Police Department (Officer E.O. Jacob) and volunteers Alan Maurer and Barry Kline.

"As more pedestrians and cyclists use the roadways and bicycle paths, it is more important than ever for walkers and bicyclists—and motorists—to understand the unique safety demands of those modes of transportation," said Mayer. "It is essential that we teach safety to the most vulnerable users of alternative transportation—our children. We must teach them how to safely use the paths we provide so they build a lifelong knowledge and confidence."

The education program is funded through a $123,000 federal 402 Grant awarded through Maryland's Highway Safety Office. The goal is to have this pilot program expanded for use around the state. Rockville was awarded the funding as it seeks to become a model program for promoting bicycles as an alternative means of transportation.

All Rockville elementary schools have expressed an interest in the educational program. Throughout the fall and next spring, Mayer will work with as many elementary schools as possible to deliver the bicycle and pedestrian curriculum.

The Wicked Witch (otherwise known as kindly Mary Lou Jacobs of Rockville's Department of Neighborhood and Community Services) helps a young "professional wrestler" with his costume.

A Real Treat

Several hundred Rockville children who might not otherwise be haunting City and County neighborhoods on Halloween will be in full costume and ready to take in all offered treats on Oct. 31 thanks to the first costume giveaway organized by Rockville's Department of Neighborhood and Community Services, the Montgomery County Department of Health and Human Services, the Rockville Jaycees and Bethesda Cares.

On Saturday, Oct. 19, referred children were invited to Rockville City Hall to select among 500 costumes that were donated by The Bethesda Paper Store. Children also were provided with safety tip Trick-or-Treat bags and had the added surprise of being able to tour "haunted rooms" set up on the lower atrium of City Hall by the Jaycees.

City staff and other volunteers dressed in costumes of their own to help children select their scarey attire.

Rockville's History in the Making

Rockville's Mayor and Council have established a program to encourage owners of historic homes to pursue historic designations for their properties. An historic designation carries tax incentives, often leads to increased property values and ensures preservation of neighborhoods.

The property at 305 Lincoln Ave. is under consideration for historic designation by Rockville's Mayor and Council. It was nominated by the present owner, Norma Hill Duffin.

The former home of Reuben Hill and Carlisle Blair Hill has been occupied by four generations of the Hill family, one of the pioneer families in the black community of Lincoln Park. Reuben Hill (former slave of the Stonestreet family before emancipation) and his wife, Rachel Martin (a free mulatto woman) purchased land on "Burgundy," east of Horner's Lane, and are one of the five African-American families shown on the 1879 Hopkins Atlas Map.

One of the oldest surviving and intact structures in Lincoln Park, the original three to four room vernacular dwelling house was constructed in 1880 by a white former Confederate soldier who willed it to Reuben Hill Sr. Reuben Thomas Hill expanded the house to its present configuration after his father's death in 1917.

There are several mysteries associated with the Reuben Hill house, such as why this area attracted enough African-American families to form a small community that fostered development of Lincoln Park and what was the relationship or bond between the white Confederate soldier and the Hill family?

Upon the death of Carlisle Blair Hill in 1986, the house was left to the current

An Air of Distinction for Rockville Television

The City of Rockville's municipal television station, The Rockville Channel (cable channel 11), garnered five national awards for programming excellence at the recent annual conference of the National Association of Telecommunications Officers and Advisors in Chicago.

TRC won the second place award in the Documentary Category for the program "Exploring Rockville's Past," a creative and in-depth look at the sites on the City's historical walking tour. TRC also won second place in the Public Health category for the program "Air Quality Codes," and the station won another second place award in the Municipal Channel Promotional Spots category.

TRC won third place in the Public and Community Meeting category for its coverage of Mayor and Council meetings, placing behind two much larger municipalities with significantly larger budgets: Los Angeles and Denver. In the Election Coverage category, TRC again was a finalist along with much larger jurisdictions, finishing in a tie for third, with King County, Wash.

TRC also received honorable mention awards for "Overall Excellence in Government Programming" and for a program about the City's tree protection and enhancement efforts.

All of the finalist programs, and virtually all of the programs on TRC, are produced by in-house television professionals, including Jane Rogers, writer/producer; Hagop Balekjian director/production specialist; Chris Abolt, editor/production specialist; Erica Singleton, video technician; and Doug Breisch, Rockville's Television and Telecommunications Manager. 💎

Rockville Up Close: Sister City Corp.

Residents help shape Rockville through involvement with neighborhood and civic associations and participation on Mayor and Council-appointed Boards and Commissions. On a regular basis, Rockville Up Close will take an in-depth look at these organizations and their important roles.

The City of Rockville's Sister City Corporation recently hosted members of a girls' basketball team and a delegation of visitors from Pinneberg, Germany, to enhance the already strong, 45-year relationship between the two cities.

The Sister City Corporation was created in 1956 by President Dwight Eisenhower to involve people and organized groups in citizen diplomacy.

In 1957, Rockville was paired with Pinneberg, which has many of the same characteristics, needs and concerns.

As part of the Sister City cultural exchange, members of the City's Police Department, Rockville's Volunteer Fire Department, Rockville government employees and others have traveled to Germany and Pinneberg citizens and officials have made several trips to Rockville.

David E. L'Heureux, president of the organization, and was present as the Sister City Corporation celebrated its 40th anniversary in 1997. The occasion garnered recognition from President Bill Clinton and Governor Parris Glendening.

In addition to the exchanges, the Sister City Corporation participates in various programs and activities to promote cultural enrichment for both cities in the areas of music, sports, technology, gardening, art, teaching, city management and more.
